Sliced Apple Pie.

Line a deep pie plate with good puff paste. Put into this pie and core and thinly sliced apples, sprinkle thickly with sugar and squeeze a few drops of lemon juice upon them. Add more sliced apple, more sugar, a little more lemon and proceed in this way until the dish is full. Cover with a round of puff paste, pinch together the edges of the upper and lower crusts and cut several slits in the upper to allow the steam to escape. Bake in a steady oven to a golden brown, covering the pie with paper for the first ten minutes.

During the last few years refrigeration has steadily received more and more attention in Russia. A boom cold storage construction was expected there when the war broke out.

TO PRESERVE PEARS.

Many persons who do not especially care for pears fresh and raw do like cooked pears of various sorts—canned and pickled. So these pear preserves serve as a means of giving much variety to the winter menu and are worth while preparing:

Ginger pears.—Peel the pears, cut in small pieces, and for each pound of fruit use a pound of sugar and one lemon for each pound of sugar, using also the grated peel of half of them. Add two ounces of preserved ginger, cut very fine, and cook over a slow fire until thick. Put away in glasses, using brandied paper on top.

Pear butter.—Wash the pears and without peeling them boil them until they fall to pieces. Run them through a colander to remove the cores, seeds and skins. Put the pulp into a stone crock with half as much sugar, add spices to suit the taste, and cook mixture slowly until it comes smooth and thick, stirring it carefully to prevent burning. Seal the butter in jars.

Pear marmalade—Choose nice, fine-flavored pears. Pare, core and quarter and drop into cold water. When ready to use drain and weigh, and to each pound of fruit allow three-fourths pound of sugar. Pour over just enough water to cover and simmer until tender. Make a sirup with the sugar and some of the water in which the pears were boiled, add to this sirup lemons sliced very thin, use about one lemon to each six pounds of fruit. Boil the sirup until thick, then add the pears and simmer until they are clear. Pack fruit into jars and pour the sirup over.

Sweet pickled pears.—Pare fruit and, if small, leave whole, if large, halve. Weigh and for every four pounds of fruit allow two pounds of sugar, one cup of good vinegar and half cup of water. Boil the sugar, water and vinegar, and when boiling add the spices in little bags, using to every pint of the sirup two or three sticks of cinnamon, and teaspoonful each of cloves and mace or allspice and a half ounce of ginger root. If preferred, nothing but the ginger root and cinnamon need be used. Simmer for ten minutes, then put in the fruit and simmer until tender enough to pierce with a straw. Lift fruit out carefully and place in jars. Boil the sirup a few minutes longer and pour over the fruit.

Fur bands frequently edge the bottom of separate coats.

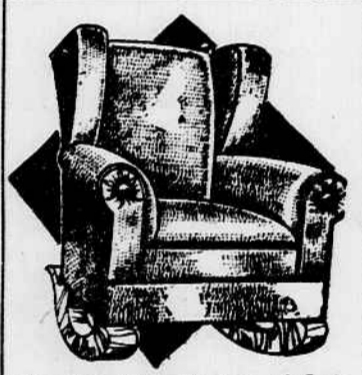

The Heart of the Home Is the Living Room

IN every home there should be a room where the family gather of an evening for rest or study—a place of comfort and cheerful surroundings. To some it may be the library, to others a sitting room. But call it what you may, it is a room that should promise comfort, ease and freedom from the cares of the day. The task of making the home beautiful and cheerful is our inspiring task. It is a serious work, and we take it seriously. When you see the wonderful and extensive preparations evidenced in the long aisle of artistic, honestly built furniture for the living room, inspecting the wide range of values, when you feel the cheerful optimism emanating from this self-same furniture you quickly realize that we've gone into the question of furnishings for the living room upon no small scale.
